

Thinking Process.

Means to an End

→ continuously and consciously following through essential bits of information.

→ to make sense of the essence of ~~thing~~ that information.

→ the exact bits of information is not useful as long as the evidence or the true effect is understood.

→ thinks in terms of the idea, or hence to block out noise as, trying to consciously think about idea/essence requires oneself to bit ~~are~~ (translated to bit ~~are~~ make up the essence) make up the bigger essence

→ Hence, the process is meaningless.

Procedural.

Problem
input or output
may be different concentrated

→ following thing in all possible list of information, unconscious and even the unconscious bits of information.

→ After the bits of information (how ~~information~~ and place them in order to make sense of the things.

→ the order of the bits of information leads to the idea being typed as different order leads to different end result. The end result is simply different with line (only different proper)

→ thinks in terms of process hence, they are forced to be in all sorts of information; essence of capital, office or essential; what ~~there~~ or allow only significant information to be entered

→ then, the process is the abstract ordered. And ~~it~~ puts the idea is the secondary thing